INTRODUCTION

Watching movies is one of the essential aspects of modern life. Different people watch movies for various reasons. They are reviving themselves, acquiring knowledge and moral principles, studying a distant language, and making an effort to understand different cultures. Most individuals like viewing movies, regardless of their circumstances, backgrounds, identities, sexes, or ages. The movie is available for viewing anywhere and whenever. According to (Yousuf & Dadabhoy, 2013.) "A medium that gives valuable messages for audiences is the movie". It can show the audience an image. A movie can clearly introduce itself to the viewer. Each audience can consume a distinct work that the film makes that is practical for each audience to ingest. Numerous subjects are frequently optionally provided. When picking the movies, we must use creativity. We should pick a movie that has a lot of beneficial effects on our lives. The movie offers lessons that could have positive effects in Addition to being purely entertaining. There are many movies that teach valuable lessons. However, the movie's educational good message is what matters most. Noel Carrol (in Amy Coplan and Peter Goldie, 2011) states that "to identify elements of a movie effectively watching the movie is the best way for audiences".

Literature uses well-chosen words that have dramatic effects to convey real-life experience. Connotative language is being employed. Literature strives to create works that will be enjoyed by all audiences. Little literature has an impact on how people live. This is true because a society's literature constitutes the main component of culture. It includes the beliefs, ideals, and conflicts of humans. Literature is a vehicle for expressing various ideas, especially those that are constructive. A creative concept can be transferred through writing. According to (Risdiyanto, 2020.) "It helps to grow our attitudes that are helpful to live in a social environment. In a movie, literature uses engaging media in a certain way to connect with viewers so that they may understand the message of the film. Literature is an aesthetic component that is enjoyable and qualified for admiration of a person's individual imagination toward life, expressing ideas, and feeling. Writing that intentionally and imaginatively tinkers with language in order to imply ideas and images that capture the reader's imagination is referred to as literature.

Altruism values are ingrained in everyday life. Usually, it's a way that person displays themselves. When people interact with society, their attitudes might be influenced by altruism values. It could be rated as either good or poor. The author will focus on altruism in this research since altruistic principles are crucial for teaching conduct, humanity, compassion, and many other traits as well as for daily living in general. For many people, altruism values are quite significant. since it can improve the standard of human life. They can assist one another without expecting compensation. Altruistic principles teach people to genuinely assist other people.

People watch their preferred films. They frequently enjoy watching good dinosaur movies. The Good Dinosaur is a potential 2015 American 3D computer-animated comedy-drama adventure buddy film directed by Peter Sohn from a screenplay by Meg LeFauve and distributed globally byfilm alternative Disney Pictures. It's fiction that dinosaur attacks don't exist. Arlo, a baby Apatosaurus, makes an odd human buddy while traversing a harsh and enigmatic landscape in the movie. The film was directed by Bob Peterson, who created the idea for the narrative, until August 2013. Sohn was introduced as the new director in October 2014. The movie is the first time Pixar has released two feature films in the same year, joining Inside Out. Positive reviews greeted The Nice Dinosaur's November 10, 2015, Paris premiere before its November 25, 2015, release in the United States. The writer chose a good dinosaur movie because it is entertaining, simpler to grasp, and has numerous messages, particularly altruism, that people will understand.

The idea of altruism refers to helping others without expecting anything in return. A selfless care for others is called altruism. According to (Frimannson, 2009), "altruism is a fundamental element of the moral idea. Goodness values are part of the nature of humans". Any activity intended to raise another person's positive values is referred to as "altruistic behavior," especially when it doesn't appear that the action's performer will directly benefit from it. Helping others is a well-adapted social behavior, particularly for teachers.

The main topic of this investigation was A Descriptive Study on Altruism of the Good Dinosaur Movie. The author expected that this study was be able to demonstrate to the reader the value of altruism. In light of the foregoing justifications, the author was investigated the altruism in the film The Good Dinosaur.

RESEARCH METHOD

The descriptive method was applied by the researcher in this study. According to Rubie et al, (in Thyer, 2010) states that "descriptive research is a method to describe a characteristic of a sample and the relationship between phenomena, situations, and events observed by the writer". he researcher's primary focus in this study was qualitative information. In this study, the descriptive methodology was employed. Because the researcher looked into the educational value of the movie and described the findings of an examination of the prevailing altruism values in a successful dinosaur movie. The researcher collects data while explaining and investigating. The researcher employed qualitative research for this project. According to (Cresswell & Creswell, 2018), "Qualitative research is an approach to exploring the meaning individuals or groups ascribe to understanding a social or Human problem". To better understand concepts, opinions, or experiences, qualitative research entails gathering and evaluating non-numerical data (such as text, video, or audio).

The tools for data collecting include observation tables and documents. The researcher employed the documentation technique to get the data for this study. The technique of data analysis was descriptive analysis.

In collecting data, three steps were taken to gather the data. Downloading the movie and the script was the first step. The researcher initially downloaded the screenplay and the movie. As a technique to gather data, the researcher kept them. The second step involved analyzing the movie's dialogue. The researcher learned the dialogue in the movie by reading it in the subsequent steps. The data's dialogue was grasped by the researcher. The next step was to choose the movie's pertinent speech. The dialogue was chosen by the researcher to be based on the film's script in the final steps. The most crucial component of analyzing the suitable facts with respect to the research topic is relevant discourse.

In analyzing data, there were four steps done. The first step was watching the movie more than twice and identified the whole characters of the movie. In the first step, the movie was seen ten times by the researcher. Because doing so will help the researcher evaluate and comprehend the entire film and cast of characters. The second steps were Classifying the dialogue that is related to altruism values. In the second steps, the researcher classified the conversation. The researcher picked an altruism-related conversation that was pertinent to the subject. The third steps were Interpreting and describing the data. In third steps, the researcher, the data that were derived from the research's findings were described by the researcher. The last steps were Draw Conclusion. In the last steps, the researcher came to a conclusion based on the findings of the research.

Lessons that we can learn from that movie; As a teacher, we should be humble to everyone wherever we are. When we are teaching in class or communicating in social environment, we do not make arbitrary accusations against students or anyone if we do not have strong evidence, we should always support our students, we should adapt to face the situation where we teach or live. Sometimes there is a situation that makes us difficult, we must be firm and fair, we should not underestimate other people in particular in their ability to learn academically and non-academically. As student, we should respect your teacher or lecturer in class and outside, we should respect to everyone despite they are strange, we can help people without the need for something. As human beings, we should respect everyone whether younger or older than us, we do not ever give up in a bad situation, and we should appreciate anything happen in our life, good or bad.

Discussion

The researcher examines benevolence in fictional characters in this section. The researchers' conclusions were all presented as speech. The researcher's collected utterances are consistent with the markers of the various types of altruism stated in the literature review. Poppa wanted to take care of his garden alongside his wife and kids, thus that is how it all began. Altruism's value is embodied in it. According to (Frimannson, 2009), "altruism is a fundamental element of the moral idea. Goodness values are part of the nature of humans". That is altruistic conduct. We can tell that Poppa cares deeply about and wants to always provide for her family. Additionally, he supports his wife and kids. This statement embodies altruistic principles including assisting others and taking responsibility without expecting anything in return, according to behavioral indications of altruism. Poppa is genuinely interested in supporting and caring for her family. He had no expectations. This has a lot to do with altruism in general. Then, as they are hunting for a route home, Arlo protects Spot from harm, and he never gives it a second thought. Despite the threat to his life, Arlo always takes care of Spot. In a dream, Arlo encounters his father, who offers to take him along but decides to focus on saving Spot. Even though Arlo doesn't receive anything in Return, he still cares deeply about and loves Spot. The researcher thinks that this is an example of altruistic value in this situation. The markers that were previously identified in establishing the altruistic value have been satisfied, and this speech contains them. Following that, Poppa asks Arlo to accompany him somewhere at night. Even though it seemed highly unlikely, they nevertheless went. In the end, Arlo was hurt after falling. His grandfather felt bad for him. Poppa recognized Arlo's emotions. Poppa sympathizes with Arlo and feels sorry for him. Altruistic empathy includes this statement. From all the statements that researchers in the movie have gleaned, the deciding indication of each form of altruism that has been mentioned in the literature review is a very crucial issue. Researchers have examined the utterances in question and used indications as the primary criteria for judging whether or not they are suitable. By examining the relevant markers of altruism, the researcher links the utterances she has collected to the different types of altruism stated in the literature review. In addition to indications, the movie's aspects are crucial for academics in establishing a connection between the utterances heard and the kinds of altruism portrayed in the movie. According to (Birnbacher, 2013), who states that "values have kinds of things". The quotes that were included in the movie also reflect how altruism is generally understood.

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

Conclusion

In the course of human existence, altruism is crucial. Altruism values can also be found in movies, particularly in the Good Dinosaur Movie. Altruistic or moral principles found in Manny's film serve as excellent role models for us. Altruisms come in various forms, particularly altruistic attitudes, actions, and empathy. The Good Dinosaur Movie has all of them, according to the study. They are very significant to us, particularly if we are English teachers or students. From there, we can learn how to assist others; duty includes empathy and compassion for feeling compelled to assist others, especially as a teacher who must instruct and encourage kids without constantly receiving praise or rewards. The researcher also learned a lot of things that are relevant to teachers today and in the future.
